

government without any consideration given to what is going to happen to the people who are to receive these services. That's why I say they're not viewed, they are not considered as human beings. You have nonanimate objects in the minds of these bureaucrats, and you move this one here, that one to the left, another one a bit forward until you get them placed like you put checkers on a checkerboard, and you never consider that there's an impact on actual human beings and their lives. With all the talk of family values, morality, tradition, a society, a government which is compassionate and caring, talk about throwing out the baby with the bath water, this is worse than that. Who has been able to show that the services are going to be of higher quality or the delivery done more rapidly? What will stop Leuenberger from going after one of these families again? They register people who are homosexual and who have AIDS. Why do you register people in this society? In order to discriminate against them, to discriminate against them, and treat them like less than human beings. We talk about human services, we ought to talk about inhuman nonservice. The people who make it possible for these bureaucrats to earn a living do not receive from those bureaucrats respect or consideration and what is being done here is going to give us more of the same, only it will be magnified. It will be worse. These agencies deal with the most vulnerable people in this society, those who have no organizations, those who have no spokesperson, but those whose misery, whose impoverishment, whose ignorance, whose illness makes it possible for people who have contempt for them to live and eat high on the hog, who don't want to be in the same room with these unfortunate people because they are not worthy. They take that old hypocritical dodge that the Bible talked about, draw not nigh unto me for I am holier than thou. These are the things we ought to be talking about. We're not playing checkers, at least we ought not to be.

PRESIDENT' ROBAK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: And when the chickens come home to roost, people are going to scurry and flea like rats jumping off a sinking ship and nobody is going to assume responsibility. As Senator Hillman said the other day, I look at the worst thing that can happen, especially when we are dealing with vulnerable helpless people because the worst thing that can happen generally does happen to them. We can't even get a 25 cent raise in the minimum wage, but we are going to be debating
